Tuscany at an easy pace

8 days: Florence, Lucca, Siena and the Val d'Orcia without the rush

Tuscany for parents and anyone who'd rather not rush: just two bases, Florence with the Uffizi and the view from Piazzale Michelangelo, the flat walls of Lucca, Siena and its Campo, and one day in the Val d'Orcia countryside with a driver. No car needed, by train and bus, with an afternoon break. Book everything yourself and keep this guide on your phone: it works offline.

At a glance

ID card is enough

Italy is in the EU and Schengen: Czech citizens need only a valid ID card or passport (Czech MFA)

Checked

Free airport assistance passengers with reduced mobility, including because of age, are entitled to free assistance in the EU from check-in to the gate; request it from the airline at least 48 hours ahead (EU Regulation 1107/2006)

Checked

Insurance and age

check your travel insurance for age limits and cover for existing conditions and repatriation

Checked

Uffizi: book ahead

the Uffizi and the Accademia close on Mondays; buy timed tickets in advance

ZTL: no-car zones

cars may not enter historic centres; cameras send fines to your home

EHIC

the European Health Insurance Card is valid; travel insurance is still recommended

Day by day

1 Arrival

Transfer to Florence, an early evening stroll past the Duomo and Ponte Vecchio, dinner.

2 Florence: the Duomo

The cathedral and baptistery in the morning, a break in the afternoon. Bus 12 or 13 up to Piazzale Michelangelo for sunset, not the climb on foot.

3 Florence: the Uffizi

The Uffizi first thing with a booking, about 2–3 hours. The Oltrarno and Santo Spirito in the afternoon. Easier option: just the Uffizi and a café.

What you will see

Florence Cathedral

The cathedral with Brunelleschi's dome; 463 steps up the dome, but the ground floor is easy.

Time: 1 hour

The Uffizi

Botticelli, Leonardo and Michelangelo, with lifts inside.

Time: 2–3 hours
